This six-lesson unit is rooted in exploring the themes and issues portrayed in the He Named Me Malala documentary. The film introduces students to discussions surrounding unity, peace and education in the face of terrorism. These thought-provoking topics help to facilitate discussion among students, introduce them to writer’s purpose, as well as stimulate creative and non-fiction writing. These lessons are designed to help students develop their skills in English across key stages three, four and five.

Short Synopsis
When 11-year-old blogger Malala Yousafzai began detailing her experiences in the Swat Valley of Pakistan for the BBC, she had no idea what momentous changes were coming in her life. Her father, Ziauddin, a school founder and dedicated teacher, was outspoken in his belief that girls, including his beloved daughter, had a right to an education. As they continued to speak out against restrictions imposed by extremists, Ziauddin received constant death threats, so many that he began to sleep in different places. But it was Malala who was almost killed, shot in the head by a gunman on her way home from school. Her survival and recovery have been little short of miraculous.

Instead of being cowed by this horrific attack, Malala began to use the international attention she attracted to advocate for the cause of girls’ education worldwide. Through her speeches, her autobiography I Am Malala, the work the Malala Fund, and her travels to places where girls’ education is in crisis, she has continued to focus on the effort to give all girls 12 years of safe, quality and free education. The film He Named Me Malala both celebrates her dedication to girls’ education and gives the viewer insight into her motivation. It begins with an animated portrayal of the teenage folk hero for whom Malala was named, Malalai of Maiwand, whose fearlessness and love of country turned the tide of battle for Afghan fighters. From those opening scenes, live action and animation tell the story of Malala’s life before and after the attack. We see her at various times of her life: severely wounded in the hospital, teasing her brothers in her new home in England, giving a speech to the United Nations, teaching a class in Kenya, and more. Her efforts are ongoing and they are realised through her organization, the Malala Fund, which empowers girls through quality secondary education to achieve their potential and inspire positive change in their communities.

LESSON 1
INTRODUCING MALALA

Overview
To use relevant evidence to support our inferences.

Starter
Students are shown a set of striking images and invited to form inferences based on these pictures. One of the images will be of Malala’s eyes. (Worksheet 1.1 Forming Inferences) At this stage, the students are unaware of the theme of the unit and are invited to guess who the face belongs to. They simply need to make inferences about her age, feelings etc. by answering the following questions:

— What do you understand from the word infer?
— What can you infer about the people in the images?
— How would you compare the inferences you have made?
— Look carefully at picture A. Can you identify who the eyes belong to?

This will prompt students to engage with the skill of inference, as well as generate intrigue around the topic. Teacher to reveal Malala’s full face and identity (Worksheet 1.2 About Malala). Use this as an opportunity to assess student’s prior knowledge of Malala’s story.

Main Activity
— Watch Clip 1: Background of Malala’s Story and make notes based on the following prompt questions:
  o Malala’s personal background
  o Social context
  o Political activism
  o Interests and values
  o What can you infer about Malala’s character, from her interests and values?

— Students will need to complete a profile for Malala based on the information from the clip, as well as their own independent research. They can find plenty of helpful information at www.malala.org and by searching for news reports and opinion pieces from the times of the key events in Malala’s life. Use a range of sources.

— Students should then read an extract from the Prologue of I Am Malala (Worksheet 1.3 Leaving Home) and begin developing inferences.
  o Choose 3-4 quotes that you find interesting and write inferences to go with these quotes.
  o Can you write an analytical paragraph based on your evidence?

Plenary
Students should peer assess their partner’s work by swapping books and identifying their strongest inference.

Homework
Students to create a collage of pictures and develop inferences based on these pictures.

Equipment/resources

— Worksheet 1.1 Forming Inferences
— Worksheet 1.2 About Malala
— Worksheet 1.3 Leaving Home
Assessment
Mini plenaries can be used throughout the lesson to assess learning and progress. Student responses can be assessed through question and answers.

Infer — this is when we develop interpretations based on the evidence we have.
LESSON 1
INTRODUCING MALALA

ABOUT MALALA

Provide some key information about Malala to present back to class. You might want to think about:

- Malala's personal background
- Social context
- Political activism
- Interests and values
- What can you infer about Malala's character, from her interests and values?
INTRODUCING MALALA

LEAVING HOME

As we watch the clip, think about:
— Who is Malala
— What happened to her?
— What was the reaction of the population of Pakistan?

Now create your own Malala profile using information from the clip as well as your own research. You can find plenty of helpful information at www.malala.org and by searching for news reports and opinion pieces from the times of the key events in Malala’s life. Use a range of sources.

Task: Now read the extract below. It is taken from the prologue of the book I Am Malala. What can we infer about Malala’s reaction to leaving home? Find 3-4 quotes that you find interesting and write inferences to go with these quotes. Can you write an analytical paragraph based on your evidence?

Prologue: The Day My World Changed

I come from a country which was created at midnight. When I almost died it was just after midday.

One year ago I left my home for school and never returned. I was shot by a Taliban bullet and was flown out of Pakistan unconscious. Some people say I will never return home but I believe firmly in my heart that I will. To be torn from the country that you love is not something to wish on anyone.

Now, every morning when I open my eyes, I long to see my old room full of my things, my clothes all over the floor and my school prizes on the shelves. Instead I am in a country which is five hours behind my beloved homeland Pakistan and my home in the Swat valley. But my country is centuries behind this one. Here there is any convenience you could imagine. Water running from every tap, hot or cold as you wish; lights at the flick of a switch, day and night, no need for oil lamps; ovens to cook on that don’t need anyone to go and fetch gas cylinders from the bazaar. Here everything is so modern one can even find food ready cooked in packets.

When I stand in front of my window and look out, I see tall buildings, long roads full of vehicles moving in orderly lines, neat green hedges and lawns, and tidy pavements to walk on. I close my eyes and for a moment I am back in my valley - the high snow-topped mountains, green waving fields and fresh blue rivers - and my heart smiles when it looks at the people of Swat. My mind transports me back to my school and there I am reunited with my friends and teacher. I meet my best friend Monica and we sit together, talking and joking as if I had never left.

Then I remember that I am in Birmingham, England.

FINDING FORGIVENESS

Overview
To develop a convincing narrative voice.

Starter
Students to engage with the powerful image of the Reconciliation statue in Coventry Cathedral (Worksheet 2.1 Symbolism).

— What do you think the picture symbolises?
— Which figures/ events in history do you associate with this feeling?
— Write a caption to go with the picture.

Following students’ initial responses, teacher to explain significance of reconciliation and forgiveness in the aftermath of WW2.

Afterwards, an engagement with Nelson Mandela’s quote (Worksheet 2.2 Blog Writing) will be a further opportunity for students to reflect on the power of forgiveness.

— What do you think of Nelson Mandela’s perception of forgiveness?
— Why could this be considered a healthy and positive mindset?

Main Activity
Watch Clip 2: Malala’s Prognosis and Forgiveness and answer the discussion questions:

— What sort of changes did Malala encounter in her life?
— Why was forgiveness important?
— Where do you think Malala drew her strength from in order to forgive?

Students should create a blog from the perspective of Malala and express her feelings towards the transitions and changes she faces. Students should refer to TAP (Worksheet 2.2 Blog Writing) and also visit a number of blogs in order to identify the relevant features to use in a blog.

Plenary
Exhibition of Work: Students should present their work to the class and peer assess one another’s blog entries.

Homework

Lesson 1
Introducing Malala

Blog Writing

Before you write your blog remember to TAP your text:

T = Text Type
What is the text type? In this case, it’s a blog, so how will you evidence this?

A = Audience
Choose your target audience for your blog. If it’s aimed at young people, how will you appeal to them? If you’re writing a blog about Malala, a female role-model, and girls’ education — how will you make sure that both girls and boys connect and relate to your points?

P = Purpose
The purpose of your blog is to inform people of Malala’s story as well as persuade them of the power of forgiveness. Think carefully about how you will shape language to do this. Record your observations based on the blogs you have researched.

Plenary
Socratic discussion to create a forum for students to listen, track and peer assess.

Homework
Students can research further into the Bring Back Our Girls campaign. They should prepare a presentation to share their research with the class. LESSON 3
MALALA CAMPAIGNS IN NIGERIA

3.2 PERSUASIVE LANGUAGE

Role A
You work for the home office of the Nigerian government and believe that the best method to rescue the girls is by military force. Your job is to persuade the other people in your group to agree with you.

Role B
You work for an international human rights NGO and believe the best method to bring the girls back is through peaceful negotiations. How will you persuade the rest of your group that this is the best method?

Role C
You are a concerned citizen and believe that the fastest way to release the girls is by paying ransom money to the terrorists. How will you persuade the rest of your group to agree with your methods?

Extension
Which routes of action were taken in the months following the girls' abduction? How successful do you think the different parts of the awareness campaign was? There are various opinion pieces that go into detail about the successes and shortcomings of the campaign from different points of view. Students can analyse the perspectives and draw their own conclusions, bearing in mind the source of each opinion and comparing and contrasting different perspectives.

LESSON 4
MALALA’S VISIT TO A REFUGEE CAMP

Overview
To comment on the purpose and audience of a text.

Starter
Students to review a collection of headlines (Worksheet 4.1 Text Type — Audience — Purpose) and pictures linked to the Syrian refugee crisis. They should begin to group the headlines according to the tone created and message conveyed.
— How do the pictures link to the audience and purpose of the article?
— Make a list of your reactions to the headlines.

Main Activity
Students should watch Clip 4: Malala’s visit to Syrian Refugee Camp and record their thoughts/feelings.

In groups, students can plan a documentary project in order to inform their own community of the refugee situation here in the UK. Groups can write or storyboard a film or audio documentary to express their own understanding of and reaction to the situation.

The activity toolkit provides detail on how students can bring these plans to life, in audio or video, complete with documentary film and podcast examples. Students need to consider:
— How they will introduce the subject - Include a script for their voiceover or podcast consisting of a range of rhetorical devices.
— A target audience. How can they make sure their language and content is appropriate?
— Who they will interview? Ensure a range of points of view — which different stories can they gather from people involved in the refugee crisis?
— What angle they are going to take.
— How they want their audience to feel once they’ve watched or listened? - A persuasive ending to encourage people to educate themselves about the campaign, get involved in local projects, provide support.
— A slogan for their film, like the stand #withMalala hashtag for the He Named Me Malala campaign.

Plenary
Sharing of documentary plans and socratic discussion to talk about how they can be made and the impact they could have. If capacity allows for groups to make their podcast or film, screen and share between groups and discuss the messages portrayed in each project.

Homework
Students should research the situation surrounding girls’ education in a specific country. Students can select a country they feel needs particular awareness, or look at the countries that the Malala Fund is working in, e.g. Nigeria, Pakistan or countries supporting Syrian Refugees. With this information they should create a resource (e.g. leaflet) to educate the wider world about the plight of the girls they researched. An excellent resource can be found at www.malala.org/girls-education

Main Activity
Teacher to introduce students to the connection between voiceless communities and girls’ education. Students will complete the table (Worksheet 5.1 Imagine What It Would Be Like For Your Voice Not To Be Heard) with their ideas and reactions to the theme of education for girls in developing countries. Students may want to visit www.malala.org to collate extra information. Teacher might instruct students to complete this as a silent task in order to engage with the idea of being voiceless.

Students watch Clip 5: Malala Speaks Out and answer the following questions:

— Why does Malala decide to speak out?
— Describe the steps she takes in order to make this happen.
— Why do you think Malala felt so strongly about defending the rights of the ‘voiceless’?

Finally, students will write a letter to their Headteacher, persuading them to host a fundraising event to donate money to the Malala Fund. Visit www.malala.org for more information.

LESSON 6
UNITED NATIONS

Overview
To adapt language to suit purpose and audience.

Starter
Students should look at a range of speakers and connect them with their relevant quotes (Worksheet 6.1 How many speakers from below do you recognise?). This will give students the opportunity to begin engaging with the idea of oracy and the art of the spoken word.
— What are some of the features of an effective speech?
— Write a list and try to think of examples.
— Do any of the features from your list appear in the examples?

Main Activity
Students will generate ideas for the effective features found in speeches. Teacher might like to use the DIP IN A FOREST mnemonic (Worksheet 6.2 Writing Purpose: To Persuade) in order to generate ideas for successful writing features. Students to listen to the Clip 6: Malala’s UN Speech and record any effective features they hear, as well as responding to the following questions:
— What is the overall message of her speech?
— What sort of tone does she adopt to convey her message?
— Look back at the effective features you listed earlier. How many can you identify in Malala’s speech?

This will lead on to an independent writing task where students choose a topic they feel passionate about and write a 3-5 minute speech to persuade the United Nations to respond to their cause. They should make sure their language choice suits the purpose and audience. They may wish to DIP IN A FOREST to craft their language effectively.

Plenary
Deliver the speech and peer assess the rhetorical features. Students can use the peer assessment grid (Worksheet 6.3 Plenary Activity—Peer Assessment Grid) to record their reflections and observations.

Homework
Students should design a Malala campaign project to educate people about the Malala vision and the aims of the Malala Fund. They should collection information from the following website as a point of reference: www.malala.org

Assessment
Mini plenaries can be used throughout the lesson to assess learning and progress. Student responses can be assessed through question and answers. Peer/self assessment of written work.
